Course Name: ARTD 310 Drawing II (Nude Figure Model Drawing)

Instructor: Marc Leone

Program: Art & Design

Disclaimer:

Course Content:

ARTD 310 Drawing II is a figure drawing course within the drawing area curriculum. The course focuses on the perceptual and observational analysis of the live, nude human figures. Figure models, both female and male, articulate complex figure poses for the art student to study and draw.

Course Management: The course is led and supervised by faculty experienced in figure drawing. It is professionally managed for best practices in safety and National Association of Schools of Art and Design (NASAD) approved procedures. All instructors and models are professionally vetted, have passed a background check, and are educated in the art historical practice of figure drawing. All instructors maintain high aesthetic standards while providing excellent drawing instruction.

Historical Context:

The Study of the nude human figure dates back in practice to the 1600's and remains a canonical part of artistic instruction demonstrated through at least three centuries of art history.

Professional Skill Development:

Strong skills in drawing the nude figure provide a distinct competitive advantage for those seeking professions in the fine arts, animation, illustration, storyboarding, graphic novel creation, visual communication design, and many other areas.
