

Richard Rentz

Andy Long

Mathematics for the Liberal Arts

30 November 2014

I believe that to be able to get to know someone you have to be able to see the other side of every person. Although the statement is true about shapes it's also true about people. Every person has another side whether you can see it immediately or not.

The reason I chose to use the icosahedron instead of any other shape is because I play a card game where the life counters are Icosahedrons. Therefore the icosahedron has a special place with me.

